From Birmingham, the craft, carrying 30 passengers and four crew members in addition to the hijackers, went to Jackson, Miss.; Cleveland; Toronto; Lexington, Ky.; Chat-Tenn; Havana; a naval air station at Key West, Fla.; McCoy Air Force Base at Orlando, Fla., and Havana. Some of the other signal derelopments in the hijacking: • FBI agents shot out the four rear tires of the DC-9 as it was preparing to take off from Orlando. The plane landed on a formcovered runway at Havana to minimize risk of

● The hijackers demanded the largest-ever sum for an air hijacking—$10 million. After spurning $500,000 that was offered at Toronto, a crate of funds—$2 million according to one report—was put aboard the plane at Chattanooga.

• En route from Lexington to Chattanoga the hijackers threatened to crash the plane into the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic plant if their demands were not met. Research reactors at the plant were promptly shut down after the Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro came to the airport during the first landing in Havana to talk to the hijackers. But the attempt to get them out of the plane failed when they demanded he enter the craftand he, or his security guards,

· While the plane circled Florida before the final landing at Havana, the hijackers de-manded to talk by radio to President Nixon, who is vacationing at his Key West Biscayne, Fla., home. Mr. Nixon refused, but Transportation Secretary John Volpe tried shortly afterward to speak to the hijackers but could not raise em on the radio.

jackers demanded and got, in addition to the money, 10 parachutes, leading to early erroneous reports that there were 10 hijackers aboard the craft, Also put on board the plane were food for all aboard and stimulants, presumably to help the crew and hijackers stay awake.

It has not been determined yet if officials also met demands for bullet-proof vests and helmets or for a document with a White House seal certifying that the extortion money was a "grant,"

The known record for extortion paid in a hijacking was the $5 million handed over to Arah terrorists for the release of a

West German Lufthansa Boeing-747 Jumbo jet February.

The hijacking marked the third time in two weeks that jetliners had been diverted to Cuba-a step-up after several months when the traditional route of air pirates had been virtually neglected.

On Oct. 29, four men led by former $26,000-a-year official of the Commerce Department took an Eastern Air Lines jet from Houston to Havana. They are charged not only with the hijacking but also with the killing of an Eastern employee who evidently tried to intercept them, with an attempted bank robbery cutside Washington, and with the killing of a bank official and a policeman in the attempt. Last Wednesday, five gunmen hijacked a Mexican airliner, obtained the release of six political prisoners and the sum of $330,000, and flew to Havana. The Cuban government promptly let both airliners and those aboard return to their respective countries. But it has given no indication yet of changing its policy of not hand-ing back hijackers or extortion

Thieu Reported To Soften Stand On Truce Terms

By Fox Butterfield

SAIGON, Nov. 12 (NYT).-Following two days of talks with White House envoy Gen. Alexander M. Haig jr., President Nguyen Van Thieu has modified his total opposition to the draft U.S.-North Vietnamese peace settlement. But he is still unwilling to fully accept it, informed Vietnamese and American officials said today. In what Mr. Thieu evidently considered an important concession.

the sources report, he told Gen. Haig that he could agree to the nine-point settlement if North Vietnam would at least pledge "in principle" to withdraw its troops from South Vietnam. Soch an agreement in principle, one well placed South Vietnamese source said, would not satisfy Mr. Thieu's repeated demand that North Vietnam withdraw all its troops from the South be-fore a cease-fire. After such a public pledge, Saigon would then be able to accept a "gradual with-drawal" of what it estimates to be 300,000 North Vletnamese soldiers.

Mr. Thieu's two other basic onjections to the proposed settle-ment now can be "easily worked out," the South Vietnamese source added, These are that the settlement does not provide for the reestablishment of the Demilitarized Zone as the houndary between North and South Vietnam and that the wording of the draft settlement implies that the joint commission to hold new elections will be a form of coalition government, Mr. Thien has adamantly rejected any plan that involved coalition government because he fears it would lead to a Communist takeover.

Letter For Nixon

The South Vietnamese confirmed that after Mr. Thieu's more than five bours of talks with Gen. Haig, who is Henry A. Kissinger's chief deputy, he gave the general a letter for President Nixon. However, the source said, the letter was mostly one of "courtesy" and did not indicate that Mr. Thieu was prepared to accept a settlement

This version of the secret talks in the presidential palace was substantially confirmed by quali-fied U.S. officials, who said that, while some progress had been made, "basic differences of position remain." In the only official American statement on the talks, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said this morning, as Gen. Haig left Saigon, that the meetings were "cordial and constructive." The key question now, one of-ficial remarked, is how long Mr.

Nixon and Mr. Kissinger are willing to put up with Mr. Thieu's opposition to their carefully plan-ned settlement. The South Vietnamese leader himself is unsure. the official commented, and he is "playing a brand new ball game where no one knows the rules." Tacit Understanding

The official speculated that in tha Paris negotiations Mr. Kissinger may have purposely avoided demanding that Hanol withdraw all its troops, since it would be almost impossible to enforce such a provision. Instead, the official suggested, Mr. Kissinger may have been given some tacit understanding by Hanoi that it itself wanted to pull back sone troops from the South.

Vietnamese sources in the pres-idential palace reported today that Gen. Haig had in fact told Mr. Thieu that the United States had been given indications that North Vietnam would voluntarily withdraw at least some of its

Attacks Are Heaviest Since Oct. 22 Limit

SAIGON, Nov. 12 (AP) -American warplanes mounted their heaviest attacks against North Vietnam since bombing was restricted to targets below the 20th Parallel on Oct. 22, the U.S. command announced today.

Air Force and carrier-based planes launched more than 240 actical strikes yesterday in a hld to disrupt a flood of fresh Communist war material to the battlefronts of South Vietnam, B-52s, meanwhile, made 36 sorties north of the Demilitarized Zone to drop more than 1,000 tons of bombs on enemy supply caches around the ports of Vinh and Dong Hol. About 60 B-52s flew missions against Communist troop concentrations and staging areas in South Vietnam, many of them just below the DMZ. The North Vietnamese shot down three Navy A-7 bombers Friday and yesterday, the U.S. command reported. Two pilots were reported rescued and one was

U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger announced on Oct. 26 that Hanol had been informed four days previously that bombing north of the 20th Parallel would be halted, apparently as a good-will gesture during the current Indochina peace talks.

Since his announcement, tactical air strikes against the North averaged 110 a day until Friday when they were increased to 180. Yesterday's attacks were the heaviest since Oct. 17, but they were all below the 20th Parallel.

Targets included military truck convoys, river craft, rail and road bridges, rolling stock, warehouses and armored vehicles. Several large fires and secondary explosions were reported.

Three Seventh Fleet destroyers also joined in the operation to the Communist supply buildup. They bombarded a transshipment point and storage facilities near Dong Hoi.

Ground action in South Vietnam remained generally light although, around the northern city of Quang Tri, government marines were hit by more than 1.000 rounds of Communist artillery, rocket and mortar fire. 87 Red Attacks

A total of 87 Communist attacks was reported throughout South Vietnam: 69 of the attacks involved artillery, mortar and rocket fire.

Communist-led forces fired 45 122-mm rockets into the big Bien Hos base camp and a nearby hamlet, 15 miles northeast of Saigon. Three children were killed and seven government soldiers and four civilians were wounded in the bombardment. A napalm depot was destroyed and a South Vietnamese F-5 jet damaged in the attack. Thirteen U.S. servicemen were injured. About 400 tons of ammunition was destroyed by fire at a depot 12 miles east of Saigon early to-

Egypt Reported Getting 60 Missiles

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (NYT). -The Soviet Union recently has shipped about 60 advanced surface-to-air missiles to Egypt and turned them over to Egyptian forces, according to U.S. military and diplomatic sources.

The Russians also are believed to have sent hundreds of technical advisers and training specialists over the last few weeks, both to show the Egyptians how to operate and maintain the new equipment and to assist them in maintaining Soviet-built jets and other weapons previously provid-

Before President Anwar Sadat'a expulsion order in July, the Russians had from 15,000 to 20,000 military advisers, technicians and air defense combat personnel in Egypt. Western analysts said the total advisory force was believed to have shrunk to a low of from 200 to 300 men. Now they estimate there are between 500 and 1,000 Soviet military technical advisers in Egypt. Military and diplomatic sources say the Egyptians appear to have reluctantly turned back to Moscow for help after encountering repeated frustration in seeking advanced weapons from Western

Missiles Removed

For example, the sources say the Egyptians were unsuccessful in negotiations with Britain to purchase the Rapier low-altitude surface-to-air missile system.

They were also unsuccessful in getting France to agree to sell an advanced version of the Mirage fighter-bomber, which has not yet gone into full production. In fact, the sources said, France warned that if Libya was seen to be turning over to Egypt any of the Mirage-5 fighters Libys already has received. Paris might cut off delivery of the remaining 55 Mirage-5s that are scheduled for shipment.

Some analysts believe that the frustration Cairo has experienced in finding alternative sources of weapons and technicians in the West and the fact that, in desperation, it had to turn back to Moscow for help, probably is ona of the factors contributing to the reported malaise in the Egyptian armed forces and to President Sadat's recent firing of the De-fense Minister, Gen. Agree on Building New Embassies By Dusko Doder

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (WP).—The United States and the Soviet Union have reached a breakthrough in the 10-yearold talks over construction of new embassies in Moscow and Washington, according to Nixon administration sources. The two nations are expected to sign an agreement within three or four weeks and begin construction early next year. The break came when the Soviet Union made concessions to meet some major American demands, notably U.S. insistence that it be allowed to use American and European workers to build the interior of its embassy, to forestall hugging of In subsequent negotiations in Washington "all key issues" were resolved and only minor "bureaucratic details" remain to be settled, the sources said.

In the city of Oak Ridge, two and a half miles from the nearest plant, the police department reported that it was on full alert and that all means of precautior, have been taken. The police did not elaborate.

There are three major operations at the Oak Ridge complex, employing about 14,000 persons. These include the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, the Y-12 nuclear-weapon production plant and the K-25 gaseous-diffusion plant, At the laboratory there are at least two atomic reactors used in research. They are shielded by water. Unlike commercial nuclear power plants, which are under beavy domes of concrete and inside thick steel reactor vessels, the Oak Ridge reactors are in ordinary buildings in pools of water, with beavy concrete sides and bottoms but open at the top.

The Y-12 plant is one of eight nuclear-weapon plants in the United States. The spokesmen said it was used for "weapons component fabrication." Most of this work involves precision machining of uranium metal for bomb parts, the spokesman said, However, he avoided comment on the amount of highly dangerous in the plant's operation.

The $1-billion gaseous-diffusion plant is used to separate the useful isotope Uranium-235 from natural Uranium-238. It is done by pumping uranium hexasiuoride, a highly corrosive radioactive gas, through a series of screening devices. Spokesmen said the plant was not show down. They said the gas reverts to crystal form at room temperature.

U.S. Gives Long Binh Base to Saigo. V

By James P. Sterba SAIGON, South Vistnam, Nov. 12 (NYT).—The United States Army yesterday turned over its huge headquarters base at Long Binh, 166 miles north of Saigon, to the South Vistnamese Army. The transfer symbolized the end of direct United States Army participation in the Vietnam war after more than seven years. About 19,000 soldiers remain in South Vietnam, working chiefly as advisers to Saigon government troops, as helicopter crewmen, and as maintenance. supply and office staff. Under cease-fire proposals being considered they would have to leave South Vietnam along with about 10,000 Air Force personnel, 1,300 Marines, 1,800 sailors, and 100 Coast Guardsmen within 60 days after the signing of an agreement The Staff Moves Out

Its amall remaining headquarters staff, commanded by a major general, moved into United States Military Assistance Command offices in Saigon yesterday.

At peak strength in 1968 and 1969, the base housed nearly 50,000 American soldiers responsible for supporting the equivalent of nine United States Army combat divisions fighting throughout the country. The main combat units were: tha 17th Airbone Brigade, the First Infantry Division, the First Cavelry Division (Air-After Hijackers' Crash Threat mobile), the 25th Infantry Divi-sion, the 10th Airborne Division (Airmobile), the Fourth Infantry Division, the 82d Airborne Bri-gade, the 23d (American) Division, the 11th Armored Cavairy Regiment, the Ninth Infantry Divi-sion, the First Brigade of the Fifth Mechanized Infantry Division, and the Fifth Special Forces

Kennedy, Rogers Settle Date For 5 Doctors' Visit to Hanoi

By H.D.S. Greenway

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (WP). -The differences between the Department of State and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D., Mass., over the timing of a proposed visit by five U.S. doctors to Hanol appeared to have been settled yesterday.

"The problem has been resolved, our team will be leaving and this is no longer an issue," Dale De Haan, a counsel for Sen. Kennedy's Senate judiciary subcommittee on refugees, said yes-terday. Mr. De Haan is expected to accompany the doctors to

He could not give a precise date for the group's departure for Hanoi, but said it would be "safe to assume" that the group would leave before the end of November. Sen. Kennedy met with Secretary of State William P. Rogers on Thursday, according to Mr. De Haan, and the medical team's leader, Dr. Nevin Scrimshaw of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, flew down from Boston yesterday to meet with Mr. Rogers.

A 'Misunderstanding' The original difficulty, which Sen. Kennedy's office described as a "misunderstanding rather than a confrontation," about when the State Department reportedly advised Sen. Kennedy not to send a medical team to Hanoi "at this time."

On Sept, 21, according to Mr. De Haan, Sen. Kennedy first in-formed Mr. Rogers that the North Vietnamese had invited Sen. Kennedy to send a team of U.S. doctors to Hanoi. It was agreed that the team should not become an election issue, but Sen. Kennedy thought he had the State Department's approval to send the group after the election.

The State Department's objec-tion, when the proposed trip became public, was understood to be that a quasi-official delegation under the auspices of a congressional subcommittee should not go to Hanoi when peace negotiations were at such a delicate

Sen. Kennedy's position was that a team of doctors could not possibly burt negotiations because their visit would be humanitarian rather than political.

James Head of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, which has studied the Apollo-17 landing site under a contract from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, offered the hope that the nature of the site "will go a long way toward answering the question of what happened between four billion years ago and the origin of the moon"which was about 4.6 billion years

Mr. Head said that the landing site, which is near the Taurus Mountains and the Littrow Crater, appears to have three distinct features that are of conside able interest-highlands, plains and a dark surface dust that may be relatively young volcanic ash,

The steep-walled mountains that surround the site may have been formed by the buckling of the lunar crust after the impact or eruption that formed the nearby Sea of Serenity. Since the Sea of Seremity appears to be older than the Imbrium Basin, the most extensive feature on the moon whose explosive formation seems to have obliterated so much evidence of the moon's first 600 or 700 million years, Mr. Head said it may be possible to find ks older than those previously found.

The sub-floor of the plains, which the astronauts expect to examine with seismic and gravity experiments, may be an intermediate feature, about 3.9 billion years old. And the "dark mantle," the dusty covering on the plain at Taurus-Littrow, may be as young as one billion years old. If this is true, Mr. Head said that Apollo-17 would fill many of the gaps in the moon's chro-

Family of Five Suspected Of 22 Murders in Eight States

12 (Reuters).-Police today alleged that a nomadic family wandered the American West and Midwest on a horrifying trail of kidnapping, rape and murder, selecting doughnut-shop waitresses and other restaurant staff as their victims.

The McCrary family-father, mother, son, daughter and sonin-law-were investigated over the weekend for at least 22 murders, detectives from eight states told a press conference here. The detectives told how the bodies of teen-age girls have been found raped, strangled and

Israel Expects Nixon Pressure for Peace

JERUSALEM, Nov. 12 (UPI). Prime Minister Golds Meir said yesterday that the United States may reactivate its search for a Middle East peace now that President Nixon has been re-elected. She said that she hopes that Mr. Nixon will not force Israel to do something against its will.

In the Arab world, she said, King Husseln of Jordan has taken a "revolutionary step" in speaking of peace with Israel but that he must go a step further by stopping acting as if a war had never occurred. He cannot turn back the clock, she said. Speaking slowly in a wide-rang-

Iraq Says Arabs Now Can Employ Oil as a Weapon

BAGHDAD, Nov. 12 (Reuters). -Iraqi President Ahmed Hassan Bakr told a seminar here yesterday that Arab oil could now be used as a weapon against imperlalists and in the "decisive" battle in Palestine.

Mr. Bakr said specialists in Iraq had succeeded in running the installations of the Westernowned Iraq Petroleum Company, nationalized on June 1, and marketing the oil "despite the companies' attempt to place obstacles in our way and the campaigns of confusion they led to foil the nationalization operation."

The Iraq News Agency quoted the president as saying. "The historic nationalization decision has implemented the slogan 'Arab Oil for the Arabs,' and we can now use Arab oil as a weapon against our imperialist enemies in all our liberation battles, particularly in our decisive battle in Palestine."

LOS Augeles is where the Pacific meets the U.S. financially. Naturally, Continental Bank is there.

During the 1960's, the dollar amount of foreign trade moving through the Pacific States of the U.S. more than trebled to $14.3 billion per year.

This continuing trend, coupled with Continental Bank's desire to better serve customers in the Pacific Basin and in the western United States, strongly suggested the opening of an international banking subsidiary on the West Coast.

A major factor in the Pacific States' growth in foreign trade in the 1960's was the emergence of Los Angeles as the foreign trade capital of the West Coast. In that period, the annual volume of foreign trade through the Los Angeles customs district more than quadrupled, registering just a shade under $5 billion in 1970.

Continental's West Coast subsidiary opened September 12, 1972 in Los Angeles' Atlantic Richfield Plaza. The address is 515 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, California, 90071.

This adds one more link to Continental's comprehensive six-continent network. A network which enables us to meet the needs of multinational corporations virtually anywhere in the world. A network which, through judicious expansion, has retained the flexibility and efficiency so important to the smooth conduct of international business.

Pressures of Canada

Canada would have entered a difficult new phase after the elections in the two countrice, whatever the respective outcomes at the polls. The difficulties could be compounded, however, by the juxtaposition of President Nixon's landslide re-election and the advent of minority government in Ottawa. It is clearly in the best interests of hoth countries to handle this situation with maximum circumspection.

Bilateral negotiations on politically explosive problems of trade and economic policy will be resumed shortly. After much acrimony, the talks were postponed earlier this year until after the fall elections, when both parties expected to find themselves in easier and more secure circumstances. Instead, the Canadian team will be representing a Liberal government dependent for its very existence on the support in Parliament of the socialist New Democratic party.

The New Democrats go much further than the two higger parties in opposing American ownership of Canadian resources and industries. They will be hard to persuade that Canada, with soaring inflation and an un-

Relations between the United States and employment rate higher than that in the United States, should make the concessions on trade policy demanded by Washington as a way of helping to erase the American balance-of-payments deficit. They will fight the dilution of so-called safeguards in the automobile trade agreement of 1965 which they regard as essential for maintaining production and employment in Canada's American-owned auto plants.

> Canada must, of course, work its own way out of the political crisis brought on by elections that failed to give either the Liberals or Conservatives a majority in Parliament. But it will pay long-run dividends for relations between the countries if the United States will take great care in this period to avoid actions that could only increase Canadian political instability and stoke the fires of anti-Americanism north of the horder.

> Specifically, the Nixon administration should refrain from demanding concessions that all Canadians and a good many Americans regarded as unreasonable in the first reply. Thiel College in Greenville, Pa., announced that the great Russian cellist Mstislav Rostropovich was to perform there on Nov. 16, and to receive an honorary degree. Bot Friday the Soviet Embassy in Washington, offering the patently phony excuse that Mr. Rostropovich's schedule was full, told Thiel that the cellist and his wife, soprano Galina Vishnevskaya, wouldn't come. Obviously, he is being humiliated and caged by his government for his long and honorable record of standing up for human rights in the Soviet Union. His statement in defense of Nobel laureate Alexander Solzhenitsyn a year ago is perhaps the best publicized part of that record.

There is, to be sure, nothing new in the Kremlin's treating its most distinguished citizens in this barbaric fashion. However, there is something new, and something extremely disturbing, in the context of this latest repression. Within the last year, Soviet-American relations have nutably improved: They are "the best yet," the Soviet ambassador observed the other evening. President Nixon campaigned effectively for re-election on his contribution to this advance in Soviet-American relations, Political and strategic dialogue is proceeding, trade is expanding, the atmosphere is bright. The question forced by the Rostropovich ban is whether all of these considerable advantages are to be gained by a sellout of the values in which this nation, at least, supican concern for violations of human rights makes it to Thiel. in the Soviet Union? The issue, we submit,

On Nov. 1, on the basis of his personal goes to the heart of the purpose and meaning of détente, and of American public support for it.

> At the May summit in Moscow, furthermore, Mr. Brezhnev agreed with Mr. Nixon on a set of "Basic Principles of Mutual Relations," Principle No. 9 states: "The two sides reaffirm their intention to deepen cultural tles with one another and to encourage faller familiarization with each other's cultural values. They will promote improved conditions for cultural exchanges." A case can he made that the leash on Mr. Rostropovich does indeed familiarize the United States with official Soviet cultural values but this can hardly be what the Nixon-Brezhnev declaration had in mind. If Mr. Nixon means to have the "Basic Principles" regarded as more than a scrap of paper, then he can hardly fail to take appropriate official cognizance of an act which is in transparent violation of them.

We would prefer to believe that the Rostropovich affair is the result not of a personal intercession by Mr. Brezhnev but of one of those bureaucratic tradeofis-something for Moscow's ideological hardhatsthat are not entirely unknown in American politics either. Fortunately, there is still time and political room for the rather lowlevel and informal Soviet Embassy ban to be set aside. Mr. Nixon, himself an earlier recipient of a Thiel honorary degree, by the way, and Mr. Brezhnev, by all administration accounts a broad-minded man posedly believes. in the name of some national or ideological cause a form of justifiable homicide that deserves the indulgence of the international community?

That is a proposition that the Arah states and their supporters would have the world nevert as they seek to block United States efforts at the United Nations to promote international action against terrorism that is directed at innocent states and persons. The Arabs insist that the UN should contime as response to terrorism to a study of its underlying causes,

The Arab argument is one that the United Nations connot responsibly accept, especially in view of the recent record. During 1972 afone, 140 airpiane passengers and crew have been killed and 99 wounded in terrorist acts attenting thirty airliners from fourteen countries. In the past five years, a total of 27 diplomats from cleven countries have been kidnapped and three have been killed.

Is an act of terrorist violence committed Such acts of cold-blooded violence undermine the very foundations of international communications, diplomacy and order which the United Nations was created to promote and defend.

Even the Arabs, if they would look beyond their emotional attachment to the Palestinian cause which has sparked many-but by no means all-of the recent terrorist atrocitles, would see that their own interests lie in helping to end them. Terrorism merely breeds more terrorism from which no state or person can remain secure, as is demonstrated by the recent two-way treffic in letter bombs.

Terrorism from whatever source has hecome an intolerable threat to innocent lives and international intercourse. While making every effort to eliminate the roots of terrorism, the United Nations cannot fall to treot the international terrorist as the dangerous criminal he is.

Accord Between the Germanys

The agreement is a major historic achievement which may well serve as a precedem casting a delicate shadow over the inture of the two Koreas and the two Victinains.

The point that warrants our attention, however, is that the establishing of a detente between the two Germanys can be expected to provide a major momentum in further moving the European political situation loward a permanent easing of tensions.

In out view, the West German people's dcep-felt desire to achieve national reunification of all Germany has been recognized as a powerful factor capable of changing the flow of political events in Europe. It has moreover received the hiessing of both East and West and has assumed a central place in European politics.

The latest development also demonstrates concretely the intensity of the Soviet Union's desire to establish a détente along its European front.

NEW YORK—In a remarkable even more trouble than they now interview with Garnett Horner of the Washington Star-News, President Nixon has given his own interpretation of his election victory, and defined his approach to the second White House term.

Ha made clear that he is going to get out of the war-"You can bank on it," he told Horner. He is going to insist on a powerful defense establishment to support a leading U.S. role in the world. He is going to cut down the federal bureaucracy and federal spending so that there will be no presidential tax increases in the next four years. And he sounds as if intends to lead a moral crusade to try to put an end to the whole era of permissiveness." and nurture a new feeling of "responsibility and self-discipline" among the American people,

There has been considerable speculation in Washington about how Nixon would react to a spectacular victory: Would he be magnanimous or vindictive? Would ha defend everything he has done, seem his opposition and his critics and stick with his "winning team"?

Approach is Test

The first indication is that Nixon is going to be as pragmatic. in his second term as he was his the first. His first decision was to shake up his caninet and White House staff, cut down the federal bureaucracy, and give e sense of a new beginning and a

In his interview, Nixon seemed to assume that the arguments that won the election will enable him to govern the country, but winning and governing are two guits different things, and, hopefully, he has been around long enough now to know it.

The State Departmen And the White Hous

By Murrey Marder

WASHINGTON.-"Some friction" is bound to exist between the White House national security adviser and the State De-partment, President Nixon finally has said with refreshing candor.

A degree of friction and "competition," the President went on to say in his recent interview, "is not unhealthy," because out of constructive competition more effective foreign policy can emerge. Indeed it can: The reality, however, is that there has been friction without competition between the White House and State Department for nearly three years. The State Department virtually has been out of the game since Elliot L. Richardson left as State's No. 2 man to become secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in June, 1970.

Rogers was not a nonentity. Indeed, his non-ideological ontlook on the world probably was far more supportive of President Nixon's turneround on U.S. policy toward China, and the general abandonment of "confrontation" in place of "negotiation," than ever has been credited to Rogers.

John Irwin

The vital No. 2 post at State vacated by Richardson was filled by Rogers's nominee, John N. Ir-win 2d. Rogers wanted a quietworking deputy; Irwin has been almost unnoticeable in the post of under secretary.

Rogers often has scoffed at the talk of "low morale" in the State Department, saying that has been claimed almost since tha department came into existence. That is correct as a generality, but rarely to the point of the present dismay; Franklin D. Roosevelt often expressed despair with the State Department: John F. Kennedy called it "a bowl of jelly," and so on.

The Nixon administration entered office with a double legacy of suspicion, President Nixon was Vice-President in the Eisenhower administration, in which Rogers was attorney general.

Rogers attempted to allay the mutual disquiet. He commissioned a soul-searching study with the department on the bureaucratic couch for self-analysis. It concluded, among other things, that "the role of top leadership in stimulating creativity is crucial." That is still true.

The State Department t has tumbled into despair. As official said in the depth frustration, "We are somel like American Express-but out its prestige."

Rogers' Role

At the start of the Nixon ministration there was an ou chance that the foreign po making offices might fun constructively with Henry A. Kissinger at the V House and genial Bill Roge State, if State had a strong to run the department Rogers serving, as the role been described, as the Presic trusted chial lawyer in fo

Chicago concerns cervical cancer, cause cancer in one or another one of the major forms of animal species. Some of these are malignancy in women, and a common virus called Herpes Type

In two specimens of human cervical cancer tissue, the scientists have found fragments of the core material evidently integrated with the genetic material in the human cells.

The virus core is made up of deoxyribunucleic acid (DNA). which is the key material of heredity in all living things, DNA is the only active material of the genes and chromosomes. It provides for each cell a biological instruction sheet telling that cell what it may make and what it may become

Genetic Subversion

One of the main tenets of current theories linking viruses to human cancer is that the nucleic acid in the virus's core subverts the genetic machinery of the human cells and thus, somehow, turns on the cancer process.

No virus has yet been proved to cause any human cancer, but many cancers of animals are known to be virus-caused. Indeed, there are believed to be at least

Herpes viruses, related to but not identical with Herpes 2, which infects man. . During a telephone interview. Dr. Bernard Rolzman, leader of the research group in Chicago, said he and his colleagues had painstakingly analyzed specimens from two human cervical cancers and found, in each, fragments of virus DNA sufficient in quantity to average one fragment for each human cell.

"The experimental evidence indicates that it is integrated into the DNA of the host," said Dr.

While this does not prove that the virus DNA has actually turned on the cancer process, it does

4 Basques Hospitalized

BAYONNE, France, Nov. 12 (Reuters).-Four Spanish Basques who have been on hunger strike in a Bayonne church for more than two weeks were taken to a hospital today in a "serious condition," hospital sources re-ported. They were protesting French measures against Basques in the French-Spanish border

Dr. Roizman said he is not aware of any previous reports establishing that viral DNA fragments have been found integrated in human cancer cells. The fact that these fragments average out to one per call suggests strongly. he said, that the material has been there since the very early stages of the cancer process.

Evidence has previously been found that viral DNA from another Herpes virus is present in copious amounts in specimens of tissues from another type of cancer called Burkitt's lymphoma, he said, but the very fact that so much has been found seems to argue against its integration with the cells' DNA.

On theoretical grounds the incorporation of a fragment of DNA ms more plausible as a trigger for the cancer process.

Dr. Roizman's co-authors in a forthcoming report on these findings concerning cancer include Dr. Niza Frenkel and Dr. Enzo Cassai of the University of Chi-cago and Dr. André Mahmias of Emory University. The report is to be published in the December issue of the Precedings of the Mercedes-Benz, with the new S-Class, approaches the borders of what is technically and physically possible in automobile design today. The progress attained with these new models - in roadability, safety and comfort virtually lifts driving into a new dimension.

Roadability is as advanced as the chassis: front axle with zero roll radius, a concept tested in the C111. Combined with a rear axle featuring semi-trailing arms, this suspension guarantees remarkable directional stability and tenacious road-holding under hard comering and braking - performance representing today's technology at its peak.

Outstanding addition to an already advanced safety system: impact-absorbing front and rear body sections with controlled deformation; plus added protection against side impacts and roll-overs. A perfect harnessing of many engineering disciplines creates new comfort: roomy interior and easier handling, for example. With a turning circle of 11.4 m, the power steered S-Class distinctly improves on its predecessors.

These are only examples. The total of all improvements equals a new dimension in automobile design: the S-Class.

Advanced engineering and responsible drivers are the best basis for automobile safety. You play your role; we will play ours.

The new S-Class:

280 S: new 6-cylinder, double overhead camshaft, 160-h.p. DIN (118 kW) engine, 0 to 100 km/h in 11.5 sec. Top speed 190 km/h.

280 SE: new 6-cylinder, double overhead camshaft, electronically fuel injected, 185-h.p. DIN (136 kW) engine, 0 to 100 km/h in 10.5 sec. Top speed 200 km/h.

350 SE: V8, electronically fuel injected, 200-h.p. DIN (147 kW) engine, 0 to 100 km/h in 9.5 sec. Top speed 205 km/h.

Included as Standard Equipment:

Dirt- and water-deflecting vanes keep side windows clear. Dirt-repelling rear lights. Built-in fog light. Improved "safety cone" door locks

Man's Age: A Tale Told By a Skull

By Walter Sullivan NEW YORK (NYT).—Aus-Iraiopithecus, an apelil:e "man" that walked relatively erect, lived 25 to 3 million years ago, Homo erectus, a bectlebrowed type, lived far more recently-about a million years These two creatures arc widely thought to represent early stages in the evolution of

Last week the theory was challenged with the announcement of a new fossil discovery —a skull bearing striking resemblanees to that of modern men, indeed seemingly more like him than either Australopithecus or Homo erectus. Yet the skull was found in a layer of material that bad been de-posited about 2.6 million years

Richard Leakey, n leader of the expedition that made the find, said the new-found skull seemed to displace the two other creniures as representatives of the carry stages of man's develcoment. In addition the find appeared to push man's immediate ancestry back more than a million years, Also found at the site, in a descrt region on the cast side of Lake Rudolf, were two intact thighbones from other individuals as well as parts of the liwer leg. They indicate that at this time man already had gradunted from the stooped, loping gait inherited from his nrboreal ancestors. Mr. Leakey said that earlier sludies had led to the bollef that this change occurred much later.

"There is now clear evidence that in eastern Africa a truly upright and bipedal form c: the genus homo existed contemporanzously with Australophthecus more than 2.5 million years 250, Mr. Lenkey said.

The find was announced last week by the National leographic Society which, with the National Science Foundation and the National Museum of Kenya, in which country Lake Rudolf is situated, provided support for the excavations. It quoted Mr. Leakey as saying:

"While the skull is different from our own species, Homo sapiens, it is also different from all other known forms of carly man and thus does not fit into any of the presently held thearies of human evolution,"

Mr. Leakey sald that the cracial volume of the newfound skull was large, indicating n brain size of 800 cubic

The Ascent of Man: NEW FIND IN AFRICA Still a Puzzie Cranial (Cubic centi meters) 1500 Homo sapiens 🚓 Cranial volume: $00 cubic centimeters -1000 Estimated age: 2.6 million years -|500 Adapted from the Unesco Couries

The gradual evolution of man's brain has been represented as a progression from the skull of Australopithecus to Homo sapiens. This progression is challenged by the recent discovery by Richard Leakey of a prehistoric skull near Lake Rudolf.

For Australopithecus it was iess than 500 cubic centimeters. That of modern man is 1,500 cubic

The structure of the new skull also more nearly resembles that of modern man. Whereas Homo ereclus has the extremely heavy brow bone that continued to be typical of the early cave dwellers of Europe, as well as a thick jaw bone, these features seem to be far prominent in the newfound, although much carlier, new finds have been made by an expedition led jointly by Mr. Leakey, the son of the late Louis S. B. Leakey, dean of hunters for man's early ancestors, and by Dc, Glynn Isaac of the University of California at Berkeley.

In 1971, the expedition found more than 20 fossils of homi-nids, or man-like individuals, along with stone tools and hippopotamus bones. They were embedded in a layer of tufasolidified volcanic ash-the age of which was determined to be 2.6 million years, Apparently this was a campsite along a meandering stream inhabited by hippos. Numerous stone flakes indicated that toolmakers bad been at work and there were also working tools. such as pebble choppers and other items made from chert, a flinty stone, and volcanic rock. It appears to be the oldest hominid occupation site yet found-preserved, like Pompeii, by a deinge of volcanic ash.

The skull was found last summer. It had been crushed to hundreds of fragments and was pieced together by Dr. Maeve Leakey, Richard Leakey's wife. In view of the extensive restoration required, some ape-cialists in the field have expressed reservations as to the struc-ture of the skull.

A puzzle of long standing concerns the abrupt appearance of modern man—the socalled Cro-Magnon Man-about 40,000 years ago. His appearance was far removed from the more Man that had dominated the that had dominated the world world up to that time. It seems far-felched to propose that in some region of the world, still unknown, our trus ancestors two million years earlier were evolving along a line that had its roots in the species represented by the as yet unnamed skull from Lake Rucolf. But as Dr. William Howells, professor of anthropolegy at Harvard, has pointed out, our knowledge of 1 m's history is still fragmentary. "There are blank parts," be wrote, "but they will be illied. We have hundreds of years of exploration ahead of us." To an extraordinary extent new knowledge concerning man's family tree has come from a single geologic feature, or system of features-the rift valleys of Africa. These long, steep-walled valleys were formed when the continental crust split apart to the accompaniment of extensive volcanic activity. The valleys extend from the southern part of the continent, opposite Madagascar, to the Red Sea—liself a riant rift—and lying within the valleys are about 20 elongated

Determination of times when

lava along these rift valleys

cooled has shown that the eruptions presumably associated with onset of the rifting occurred from three to four million years ago, Australopithecus and other creatures were witness to these eruptions, and at times apparently fell victim to them. It was largely the special circumstances of the rift valleys that preserved—then reexposed-these ancient inhabitanta (so far about five stages in their evolution have been identified). The eruptions burled the remains and generated great assemblages of layers, some of them thousands of feet thick, that from the bottom upward document the evolution of all life forms in the area.

expect that the Nov. 19 elections will be decided by a traditional dynamic society. The West Germans' growing economic mobility, their willingness and ability to break social barriers, have all but erased the polarization effects of flerce political antagonism, at least as far as these switch voters are concerned.

In prosperous West Germany, workers no longer play their previous underdog role, while many white collar employees formerly willing servants of capitalism, realize more strongly than ever the rift between them and their euperiors.

Not Bewildered

There is a difference, however compared to previous national elections. Whereas most switch voters in formec elections were just plain undecided up to the last minute, it now seems that the majority of them are bewil-

Under Chancellor Willy Brandt's reign and his policy of mildly Socialist reform and seeking better relations with the Communist world, the opposition Christian Democratic party veered consider-ahly to the right while the chancellor's own party failed to suppress neo-Marxist stirrings in its lower echelons.

"A voter who is undecided," one expert said, "finally chooses what in the end seems more akin to his individual makeup. He added that this time this "residual kinship" appeared rather eroded by the parties' "drifting to extremes."

A characteristic case is that of Jürgen Kurz, a 39-year-old Co-logne suburbanite and Social Democratic voter in the 1969 national election. He shook his head violently as he explained his probable choice this time.

"It won't be the Social Democrats again." the well-to-do car salesman said. "They are getting too damn Socialist and are ruining the economy."

Hopes for 3 % Gain

Fritz Unruh, a 35-year-old department store employee in nearby Düsseldorf, scratched his head pensively when confronted with the same question. "I voted Christian Democratic in 1969," ha sald, "but I won't this time because they cannot match the Social Democrats in efforts to stop the cold war in Europe. Hnning von Borstel, a sociologist who felt the electorate's pulse for the Social Democratic party. said that his party hoped to gain at least three percentage points in the expected "ringtausch" or exchange of votes next week.

According to his assessment, the party's campaign emphasis on equal chances and a "higher qual-ity life" for all was primarily aimed at young "thinking" women and white collar employees, two categories that have been voting predominantly conservative in past West German elections.

Mr. von Borstel said that chances to sway large segments of the two groups were good because West Germany's women were tiring of their traditional housewife role and white collar workers were developing "belated". second thoughts about their function as "henchmen of basically brutal capitalism."

Of course, we will lose people too." Mr. von Borstel said. He estimated that losses would be particularly significant among a traditionally Socialist voting group-unskilled workers.

This group, he explained contained the highest proportion of uneducated and undiscriminating individuals. As sufferers from the "Peter Stuyvesant syndrome," the ad makers' utopian depiction of an allegedly intact and prob-lemiess world, they were easy prey to conservative arguments that theirs was a fine country if only the "bad Socialists" and eggheads" were prevented from ruling it any longer.

Schiller's Effect

free market-oriented Free Democrats or go all the way to the "big business" Christian Democrats are believed to be concentrated among small shop-keepers and well salaried suburbanites whom Chancellor Brandt's former economics minister. Karl Schiller, a ataunch free market man, persuaded to Social Democratio in 1969. Mr. Schiller quit his post and left the Social Democratic party this summer to protest the government's financial policy and what he termed "dangerous flirting with neo-Marxist thoughts." Mr. Schiller's demonstrative step coincided with a record increase of the cost-of-living index. It is expected to woo back a good many voters of the upper income brackets who had felt in 1969 that the time was ripe for a change after 20 years of uninterriroted Christian Democratic rule.

The Vital Floating Vote in W. German

liament is such that a few percentage points can make all the difference. Mr. Brandt's coalition government was formed on the besis of 42.7 percent for the Social Democrats and 5.8 percent for the Free Democrats against 46.1 percent for the Christian crucial importance in the election, Free Democratic Chairman Walter Scheel appealed to former Socialist sympathizers to vote for his party this time. In sharp contrast, Frances Baldwin Rainer, raised in Tuskegee's neighboring black-belt city of Union Springs, came from a prominent family, one of the leading ones in the county.

Mrs. Ford said her father, who was the leading public accountant in Union Springs until his death in the mid-1950s, was a member of the White Citizens' Council, a segregationist group, and was acquainted with Gov. George C. Wallace, who was then a circult judge in the district. At the University of Alabama

she had the traditional black-belt attitudes on racial matters—which meant that she uncritically accepted segregation as the immntable "Southern way of life." "I had all the prejudices," she acknowledged. "I lived among poor people, but I really knew very little about them." After graduation, she got a job as a caseworker with the Welfare Department in Macon County, which is 80-percent black. She lived with white friends in Union

Springs and commuted to Tus-

"It was only then that I underetood what the civil-rights people were talking about," she said. "It suddenly became very clear. People are people, no matter what their color or status."

She and Johnny arrived in Tuskegee about the same time and first met at a conference between Model Cities and Welfare officials They became friendly and started seeing one another secretly, usually at the home of friends in same. Montgomery, some 38 miles away Soon it became apparent that they were falling in love, and they spoke nervously about the ramifieations of an interracial romance in this region.

"A lot of things went through our minds," Mayor Ford recalled.
"We telt there might be actual physical danger. We thought about hurting our friends and relatives. We even thought about the effect it would have on my political career.

'Finally we came to the point, and said to bell with it. If I love you and you love me, we're going to do the only honest and right thing." Late one evening he called her on the telephone and said, Took. let's get married." She agreed immediately. think a prolonged engagement would have been very advisable under the circumstances," Mrs. Ford said, and the following day was a frenzy of activity of getting blood tests, marriage licenses and lining up a minister

They agreed to be married in the office of a school principle who was a friend. Mr. Ford arrived first and gave the minister the marriage license. The clergyman examined the document and said. "They've made a mistake. Says here she's white."

They made no mistake," Mr. Ford replied. Trembling, the clergyman performed what apparently was the first such marriage in the county's history, and on Oct. 28, 1969. six months after they had met, they were married. "I didn't even know it was against the law." Mr. Ford said. although Mrs. Ford added that she was vaguely aware that it was. In fact, at that time, mixed marriage in Alabama was a felony punishable by two to seven years in prison, and even the white county official who issued the marriage license and the minister who performed the ceremony were subject to prosecution. But there was never any hint of prosecution, and not long afterward the Alabams miscegenation statute was declared unconstitutional.

However, because of the legal cloud, the Fords were later remarried in a Catholic ceremony. Mr. Ford is a Catholic, and his wife plans to become one.

Mrs. Ford said the reaction of her cousins and school acquaintances back in Union Springs was, Well, I wouldn't do it myself, but if that's what you want to do, that's fine with me."

But while the direct comment she received was not unfavorable. she said, there were "distant retrom much of the older community, as though she no longer existed. The reaction of Mr. Pord's parents was about the

"I've had to educate my parents," ha said. They've gona through life thinking all white folks were svil, growing up in a strictly segregated society."

Mr. Ford said, "Some people told me I was throwing away my political career, but I said to heli with it. A lot of people marry for money. A lot of people marry for class. Maybe some people marry for political reasons. But we married for love."

On Sept. 12 Mr. Ford won by the narrow margin of 124 votes. He said he believes be is the first mayor in the United States who can attribute his election directly to the student vote. Even though the city is heavily black, Mr. Ford encountered strong opposition from within the black establishment, which has worked for years for biracial government.

Peace Outlook-Some Questions, Answers

By Bernard Gwertzman WASHINGTON (NYT).-More than two weeks have passed since President Nixon's chief adviser on foreign policy, Henry A. Kissinger, said "peace is at hand" in Vietnam. The administration remains optimistic but a settlement has so far remained elusive. The following is an effort to sort out what is known about the corrent situation:

Q. What is the background to the present activity?

A Mr. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho. Hanoi's chief negotietor, agreed early last month on a nine-point draft agreement, which Washington says needs some additional work, which Hand says should have been signed on Oct, 31, and which Saigon is unhappy

Q. What is being done to resolve these differences?

A. Gen. Alexander M. Hair jr., Mr. Kissinger's deputy, is in Saigon to press President Nguyen Van Thieu to drop his objections. And Mr. Kissinger, his bags packed, is hoping to meet Mr. The once again, maybe as soon as this week, to wrap up

Has Hanoi actually said that Mr. The would meet Mr. Kissinger for additional negotia-

A. Not publicly. But North Vietnam has apparently hinted —through an Agence France-Presse interview with Xuan Thuy. the leader of its delegation in Paris, and through diplomatic channels—that it will agree to one more meeting so long as the United States doesn't try to back out again.

Q. Did the administration realgo back on an agreement to sign by Oct. 31, as Hanoi charges? Complete information is still lacking. Mr. Kissinger says no, but acknowledges et the same time that the administretion had made "a major effort" to meet the Oct 31 deadline. It proved impossible, he said, to resolve everything in so short

Q. Why did Hanei set Oct. 31 as a deadline?

A. The best diplomatic guessing is that Hanoi, reading the polls accurately, was convinced Mr. Nixon would be re-elected, and decided to deal with him before the Nov. 7 election, rather than afterwards. It brought forth a conelliatory plan on Oct. 8 in Paris and insisted that it be signed by the end of the month.

Q. What effect did the elections heve on Mr. Nixon's decision not to meet Hanol's dead-

Obviously Mr. Nixon would have been delighted to have a solid agreement in time for Election Day, but by Oct, 22 he had decided there were too many holes in the accord to risk signing without one final negotiating session. Mr. Nixon clearly did not want to have the agreement run into a storm of criticism on the eve of elections.

Q. Does this mean the Presidept deliberately decided not to sign before Election Day."

A. Not exactly. What happened, according to all eccounts, seems to be this: On Oct. 22, Mr. Nivon told Hanoi that another negotiating session was needed. Efforts were being made through diplomatic channels to arrange such a session when Hanoi, on Oct. 26, broadcast the outline of the nine-point accord and demanded that the United States sign by Oct. 31. The effect was that there were no negotiations between Oct. 26 and Oct, 31: from the administration's point of view there was no sense in trying to rush negotiations in the last week before elections.

Q. Why did Hanoi publish the agreement and why did it get so angry over the Oct. 31 dead-

Hanol does not trust the United States, and may have felt that Mr. Nixon was trying to back out of the agreement while leaving the impression with the American people that an accord was close et hand. By publishing the accord, Hanoi was, in a sense, forcing the administration to say publicly what it thought about the agreement.

Q. And what does the administration think about it?

A. Mr. Kissinger on Oct. 26 said that the United States basically stands by the draft agree-ment and still hopes to sign it after remaining details are re-

Q. What "details" are most

A. Mr. Kissinger wants the international control group to be in place on the day the cease-fire begins to reduce the chances of last-minute grabbing of land and assassination as the Viet Cong try to widen their area of control. He also wants Hanoi to arknowledge that the accord does not oblige Salgon to participate in any "coalition government" with the Communists and neutrals, something which is ana thema to Mr. Thieu. These prob-lems arose along with others when Mr. Kissinger was in Salgon from Oct. 18 to 23, trying to get Mr. Thieu to drop his objections to the accord.

Q. Why is Mr. Kissinger afraid of last-minute fighting? A. While he was in Saigon, according to e key official, he re-ceived up-to-date intelligence that Hanoi bad told its cadres to open attacks as soon as the cease-fire began. This alarmed Washington and was a cause of the delay in signing the agree-

Q. What are Mr. Thieu's obicctions? And how significant are

A. Mr. Thieu is in principle opposed to any settlement short of total victory. Specifically, he wants all North Vietnamese troops withdrawn from South Vietnam to match the total American withdrawal. But the United States has told Mr. Thieu that Hanoi cannot be expected to surrender et the negotiating table what is has not lost on the battlefield. Thus, in Washington's view. Mr. Thieu should settle for an agreement giving him a better than even chance both politically and militarily with the

Q. Does Mr. Thicu really have a chance to survive without direct American military support, or is this an attempt by Washington to provide a rationale for "selling out" Mr. Thien?

A. Only time will tell. The United States believes that North Vietnam has decided to seek a political instead of a military victory in South Victnam because its main-force units have been battered since it launched its offensive last spring. What is unknown is how much political strength the Communists can muster, and whether the non-Communists in South Vietnam can unite around Mr. Thieu or another leader to keep power away from them. Militarily, South Vietnam is believed in reletively good sheps, bolstered by last-minute injections of up-todate oircraft and other military

O. What if Mr. Thieu continors to refuse to sign? Will Washington go ahead without him?

A. The administration's line is that it will not be "stampeded" into an accord by Hanoi nor "deflected" from one by Saigon. In a word, yes. But the administration believes that, in the end, Mr. Thieu will come along. He knows. and he knows the United States knows he knows, that he cannot stay in power long without economic, political and limited military support from the United States (all allowed by the agreement).

Q. What's the best guess on the timing of an agreement? A. Mr. Kissinger says it will take several weeks ooce Hanol resumes talks with him. It is probable by Christmas, and virtually a certainty by Inauguration Day in January, officials

Soviet Intentions in Vietnam: China Voices Its Skepticism

PEKING, Nov. 12 (Reuters) .--Premier Chou En-lai apparently has doubts about the Soviet Union's sincerity in wishing to see the Vietnam war end, diplomats said here yesterday, but ha says that the question of eettling the conflict should be the first problem President Nixon deals with following his election victory.

The diplomats were commenting after studying the unofflclai transcript of an interview given by the premier Friday night to a group of visiting journalisis, during which Mr. Chou gave a broad review of world affairs. The premier expressed what epeared to be China's first publicly stated doubts on the Soviet role in Vietnam when he said: "The Soviet Union has publicly expressed the wish to see the war in Vietnam come to an end. But it is very difficult to differentiate between their true and false words."

Asked if the re-election of President Nixon was good news for China Mr. Chou said: "Yes. because he did play a role in improving relations between the United States and Chine."

But we've kept it to the merest whisper.

The premier's statement was essentially similar to the sentiments expressed by high Chinese officials on Thursday night after news of the American election results had been received here,

In responding to questions about the U.S. election, Mr. Chou turned almost immediately to the theme of the Vietnam war ond sald that Mr. Nixon "should now do something to solve the Vict-nam question."

"I believe the people of the whole world, including the American people, wish this," he declar-

Asked if Chinese-American relations would develop faster now, following the re-election of Mr. Nixon, Premier Chou sald; "I cannot say that, because I believe it was yesterday Nixon made a speech in which he said reletions with China would continue to develop but there would not be e breakthrough until 1973,

"So he gives the answer.

For us, our ettention is on having the Vietnam war settled end peace realized according to the agreement already reached."

Our new aircrait is really something to make a big noise about.

It seems every time an airline flies a new plane, words like 'great', 'new' and

'fantastic' are suddenly rediscovered. But words are cheap.

And at Eastern, we don't believe in those kind of words unless we have something to back them up.

With this plane, we think we have. Eastern's new Whisperliner.

The result of more than five years design and research by Lockheed, the TriStar Whisperliner is the most convenient, most comfortable aeroplane ever designed.

Its features include the most trouble-free, efficient baggage-loading system ever developed, lock-up overhead storage cabinets for personal luggage, push-

Because Eastern were first in introducing all the extra features on the inside, we've decided we'd better do something about the outside

So Rolls-Royce set about designing a fan-jet engine, quieter than any they had ever developed.

And they succeeded, because the Whisperliner is the quietest commercial jet in the world.

So you see, even though Fastern's new aeroplane is really something to make a big noise about, we've kept it to the merest whisper.

The Banco Popular Espanol issue is the first floating-rate loan in over two years. It will be pegged one-quarter of a percentage point over the six-mouth interbank Eurodollar rate with a minimum assured rate of 5 1/4 percent; there is no limit on the maximum side. The loan will be sold in units of $10,000 or $100,000, which means only institutions will subscribe.

Various reasons are offered to explain why the borrowers are floating public issues rather than seeking funds in Japan through a private placement. In the case of the Mortgage Bank, it is re-ported that the Finnish authorities want to diversify their borrowings as much as possible and also establish the bank's name in the public dollar market.

Gillette, on the other hand, wanted to do a convertible both for the lower coupon (compared to the interest it would have to offer on a straight bond) and as a relatively inexpensive means of both increasing its capital and assuring the widest possible diversification of shareholders.

At the same time, there is no apparent stackening in the volume private placements in Japan. Venezuela is arranging a 10-year loan of $24.8 million which, at the lender's option, may have to be repaid in deutsche marks. The interest is reported to be 7.2 per-

Nixon May See Overwhelming Victory at Polls As Mandate for His Policies to Combat Inflation

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (NYT) .-The decisiveness of President Nixon's victory in last Tuesday's election may exert considerable influence in the evolution and the execution of national economic policy as he enters his second Emboldened by the size of his majority in what was widely labeled a great personal victory (or, as one political expert put it, a great personal defeat for Sen. George McGovern), the President may well assume that he has an overwhelming popular directive for aggressive action on the economic path his advisers had been counseling in recent months.

The cornerstone of that policy has been a determined effort to curtail government expenditures to haul them back toward a $250-billion limit—to prevent a renewed acceleration of inflationary pressures and to obviate the need for a tax increase to narrow the huge federal deficit.

Partly on the assumption that administration policies will achieve some success, the stock marke staged a strong rally again this week gaining more than 11 points in the Dow Jones industrial average. On Friday, the Dow index finished at a record high of 995.26, eclipsing the peak of 995.15 set on Feb. 9, 1966, after briefly piercing the 1,000 level.

Chilling Impact

With respect to government spending, the thought is that uncontrolled outlays could re-ignite inflation through a resurgence of demand-pull pressures where there is excessive desirs for a wide array of goods and services from government, business and the public-that could have a chilling impact on the economy. The Treasury reported last week that the federal deficit for the fiscal year ended last June 30 was $23,227,000,000—almost identical with the $23,033,000,000 deficit that resulted from government operations in the preceding fiscal year, and the largest since the $25-billion deficit of fiscal 1968. The projected red-ink figure for the current year is $27 billion, but it might run higher if spend-

Re-Establish Superiority

In the next four years, the New York Economist also said, the Nixon administration will make a "very clear-cut effort to re-establish the economic superiority of the United States, will attempt to re-do trade agreements with the rest of the world, while implementing an aggressive trade posture with China and Russia, and will attempt to minimize government while maximizing free enterprise."

Economist James J. O'Leary, vice - chairman of the United States Trust Company, espouses the view that renewed inflation is the great threat for 1973 and that public policy should be addressed to actions that would assure that it does not develop.

The strategy of the President in attempting to hold down fed-eral expenditures, he said, is the "right strategy," and the Federal Reserve "has to be careful not to be overaccomodative to credit demands." He added that "there should not be any weakening" of controls over wages, prices and profits.

He and others have been encouraged by the recent policies of the Fed that seem to be leanmg on the side of monetary re-keep the revaluation rate low fby having helped to minimize the size of the surplus Japan is run-ning in its overall balance of payments. The scenario heard most often is that the exports will have to continue afterward lest the surplus bulge again. In addition, institutions which have kept out of this market-such as insurance companies, which have only yen balances-may enter it once the fear of the impending revaluation is gone. (Banks are lending either dollars the Finance Ministry has deposited with them in Tokyo or dollars borrowed in the Eurodollar market1.

Elsewhere on the public market, British American Tobacco is seeking 100 million French francs. The 15-year loan is expected to bear a 7 1/2 percent coupon and an issue price of 98 1/2 for a yield to maturity of 7.53 percent. At present, yields on the secondary market range from 7.43 to 8.04 percent with the bottom of the scale reserved for official institutions such as the World Bank while the top is occupied mostly by U.K. borrowers. In the view of the managers of the BAT issue. the loan should be ranked along with Rbone-Poulenc and they be-lieve the issue will be a test of how discriminating Eurofranc investors are willing to be.

UN Environment HQ Set in Kenya Instead of Geneva

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. Nov. 12 (WP1.—A group of under-developed nations banded together Priday to switch the loca-tion of the headquarters for the new UN Environment Secretariat to Nairobi. Kenya, The United States and most European states which had expected the headquarters to be established in New York or Geneva abstained as the proposal was carried by a vote of 94-0 in the Second Committee of the General Assembly. Also among the 30 abstainers was the Soviet Union, which explained its action on the ground that it had not taken part in the Stockholm conference on the environment in June at which the idea of a permanent secretariat was adopted.

Location of the headquarters in Nairobi far from the major problems of industrial pollution, would require an additional million dollars per year above the estimated annual cost of operat-ing the secretariat in Geneva. where the level was set at only $13 million.

Taiwan Wins World Cup Golf by 2

MELBOURNE, Nov. 12 (AP).— Taiwan won the World Cup golf. championship by two strokes today after a battle with Japan in windy conditions at the Royal Melbourne Club. The Taiwan pair of Heien Min Nan and Lu Liang Huan had a 54-hole total of 438. Japan had 440, South Africa 444 and the United States and Australia tied for fourth with 445.

Hsieh won the individual international trophy with 217. It was the first time Taiwan has won the cup in the 20 years of the championships. The scores of the two-man teams from 43 nations ballooned as a 30-mile-an-hour wind lashed the 6.946-yard course. The players found it difficult to stand against the cold blasts and no one managed to match

Taiwan, after four holes day, built their overnight lead of one stroke over Japan to eight strokes as Japan's Takaaki Kono and Takashi Murakami faltered. Hsieh and Lu opened with three birdles between them on the first three holes. But then came a string of birdies. Australia's challenge for cup and team member Bruce Crampton's hid for the individual title evaporated when he triplebogeyed the 210-yerd 16th hole after failing to clear a hunker. This left Japan, playing ahead of Taiwan, as the only contender and they tied Taiwan on the 16th. Lu had a bogey after missing the green and then made a great recovery with a birdle at the 17th with a 35-foot putt. Heleh matched his partner and they went to the last hole of the championship -cut to 54 holes due to abandonment of play Friday because

The lead increased to three strokes when Kono bogeyed the 432-yard 18th. Though Hsieh dropped a stroke on the final Hole, Liz made sure of victory with a par four,

Americans Tom Weiskopf and Jim Jamieson never got to grips with the Royal Melbourne layout's hard and lightning fast

"Apart from that we could hardly stand out there against the wind," said Jamieson. "It was impossible to score well."

Weiskopf, who has had a disappointing 12 days in Australia, said. "It was a good experience but all I want to do now is get

"I thought we still had a chance until the 17th. Then I crashed with a double bogey seven and it was all over so far as we were Jamieson finished with 73-73-76-222 and Weiskopf 77-69-77-223.

Tiriac's Actions In Davis Cup Are Punished

ROME, Nov. 12 (AP).-The International Lawn Tennis Federation yesterday suspended Romanian Ion Tiriac for eight weeks for his hehavior in the Davis Cup final against the United States in Bucharest last month.

The ILTF's committee of management asked the Romanian Tennis Federation for an official report on the player's behavior to examine the possibility of further action against him, a spokesmar said.

Tiriac repeatedly argued with Argentine referee Enrique Morea during the threeday event, questioning calls, gesturing to the crowd and to his opponents and sitting on the linesmen's chairs as play was interrupted a number of times. U.S. Davis Cup player Stan Smith said after his match with Tiriac that he had lost his respect for the

The diagramed deal from a recent United States tournament involved a tricky point in de-fensive play. South made use of a delayed Stayman after his partner had rebid one no-trumo. This application of a famous convention is not standard, but it is favored by some top tournament players on both sides of the

Two clubs on the second round asked North to describe his hand further, and two diamonds was a negative response showing a minimum hand and denying three-card spade support. The jump to three spades was forcing, and the final contract was four spades, a bid that South could reasonably have made at his second turn.

West led the diamond nine, dummy played low, and East's jack was taken by the ace. South immediately returned a diamond, and East won with the king. He returned a trump, hoping to prevent South from ruffing a diamond in the dummy, and the declarer climbed up with the ace, rejecting the chance to finesse.

The diamond ten was the next lead; leading the seven for an immediate ruff would have been an error, because West would eventually have been able to ruff the ten cheaply.

Up to this point the play followed the same course in rooms; however, here the two West players parted ways. In the losed room, West made a good try by ruffing with the spade king and playing his remaining trump. This left South with a diamond loser, but he was eventually able to discard it on a heart winner by overtaking the spade jack with his queen at the third trick, and finessing in hearts to set up that suit. One spade trick, one diamond and one club were the only losers.

In the replay, West was more successful. On the diamond ten. he discarded a club, and discard-ed another club when South ruffed the diamond seven with the spade jack.

West was now in a position to secure a club ruff with the spade seven, setting the contract, and South could do nothing to prevent it. Notice that South would have made the contract in the face of this defense if he had taken a heart finesse instead of ruffing his last diamond, but the position was very difficult for him to judge.

5000 NIGHTS AT THE OPERA By Sir Rudolf Bing. Mustrated. Doubleday. 360 pp. $10 🔭

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

THE word had gotten around that in his memoirs, "5000 Nights at the Opera," the recently retired general manager of the Metropolitan Opera House was going to reveal everything, to take off the wraps, to even the score, to tell what really happened in his confrontations, meetings and battles with the Metropolitan Board, the unions, the critics, and artists such as Callas, Tebaldi and Von Karajan. But the book is nothing like that. It is, on the contrary, a serious and, to my mind, valuable defense of his administration at the Met and an always absorbing account of how a great house is run, -It offers a view of the Metropolitan Opera that opera buffs simply will not easily find elsewhere. This does not mean that the author'e versions of events will be the ultimate ones or that there is nothing to be said on the other side, sometimes on many other What the book does do is establish the dimensions of the problems involved in running the house and in maintaining the machinery that keeps it going. I can't imagine any smateur who enjoys opera at all who will come away from reading it without enlightenment.

To be sure, there is enough in the book to rile everyone from board member to second violinist, including a whole roster of technicians and artists in hetween. Sir Rudolf is a spirited and independent man who feels he is obligated to put the record straight, where it needs it, and to defend his part of the enter-prise he guided for 22 years. His literary manner is not endearing. It is dry, waspish, prickly. He simply can't turn down the chance to get back at some of those who have been goading him for so long. His stance in this book resembles that of St. Sebastian, one who has done much and endured more, thinks it is about time to let go few arrows of his own. His remark that since Beverly Sills came from Brooklyn she was a natural to do three British queens in Donizetti's operas is a niggardly remark to make about an attractive artist. And as Donal Henshan has pointed oot, Miss Sills is as much a natural for the role as Monserrat Caballé, who was Sir Rudolf's choice. And his suggestion that the new Met should have a green room for the critics so that they could park their clothes, being too cheap to check them, is a petty-minded swipe at a hard-working crew. Critics who have to make a deadline for a morning paper cao't stand on line waiting to retrieve their gear, and even those who work for afternoon papers get tired of queuelng up. If the author had had to ransom his hat and coat every time he appeared at the opera house; he too would welcome a green room. But remarks like these only take away from the serious aspects of his story. Few readers realize, for example, the extensive apprenticeship Sir Rudolf underwent before taking on the Met. For years he worked with singers and musicians in his native Austria, in opera houses in Darmstadt, in Berlin, at Glyndebourne and at the Edinburgh Music Festival, with musicians of such caliber as Fritz Busch. Ebert, Carl Bohm. His page Glyndebourne are a valuable dition to the record of famous institution—the nur of listeners who came to 1 and love the operas of Me through the Glyndebourne cordings made 40 years ago: have been enormous—and of sharply etched sketch of the who made Glyndebourne pos the singular Sir John Chr He is quite right in saying his entire life up to the tim joined the Met in 1950 had a preparation for that post.

Met aficionados will learr that television, which has such a money-maker for public spectacles, has done ing for the opera house. that recordings, in spite of glamorous list of artists on haven't contributed substan to the income of the institu They will learn that a ge manager has to come to with superannuated chor who have no pension pros with orchestral players who incompetent, with rude cla with union overtime, with lines and segregation and other matters that often light-years away from the r believe on the stage.

His book is also a shrewd of the genus artist. RIGHT TO THE HEAD—Carlos Monzon connects in the third round of his fight with Benny Briscoe. The Argentine retained his middleweight title.

Monzon Needs 15 to Beat Briscoe

BUENOS ATRES Nov. 12 (AP). -World middleweight champion Carlos Monzon, making good use of his greater height and reach, battered Philadelphia's Benny Briscoe through 15 rounds to win a unanimous decision to retain

The 30-year-old champion, making his sixth title defense, connected repeatedly with left jabs and rights to the head, but never floored Briscoe. The Philadelphian was the first challenger to force the champion to go the distance since he won the title from Nino Benvenuti in Rome in November, 1970.

Briscoe, 29, bled from the mouth in the sixth round and Monzon opened a cut over the challenger's left eye in the 12th

Monzon let Briscoe attack through most of the first 10 rounds. Each time Briscoe tried to get through Monzon's defense, the champion held him off with a left jab, followed by a right hook or cross to the head. Briscoe was unable to overcome Monzon's advantage in height-four inches -and in reach-five inches.

Briscoe seemed to hurt Monzon only in the ninth round, when he spun Monzon against the ropes with a right cross to the jaw and stunned the challenger. In the 14th, a hard right to Monzon's head made the champion stagger for a moment.

The judges gave the fight manimously to Monzon, who weighed 158 pounds to Briscoe's 157. Under Argentine rules, referee Victor Avendano did : ot score nold Weiss, had protested Avendano's appointment as referee because Avendano, an Argentine, is closely associated with promotor Juan Carlos Lectoure, who etaged the fight at the indoor Luna Park Stadium.

Avendano warned Briscoe three times during the fight-for pushing, butting with his head, and hitting below the belt.

Judge Paul Amadeo gave Monzon 149 points and Briscoe 143 under Argentina's system of giving the winner of each round 10 points and the loser 9 or 1838. Judge Hector Gaumont scored it 149-139 and Jorge Alvion 150-139. Nearly 5,000 of the 22,000 seats in the stadium were vacant. The bout was televised and broadcast by radio throughout Argentina, and televised by satellite to the

United States and Europe. Monron Attacks

With Briscoe tiring, Monzon went on the offensive in the final five rounds, forcing Briscoe back against the ropes or into a corner. In contrast, during the early rounds, Briscoe had moved constantly forward trying to get through to Monzon's head and doggedly absorbing punch after punch in the face.

For Monzon, it was his 78th, victory against three defeats, nine draws and one no-decision. One of the draws was in 2 1967 10round fight here against Briscoe. The U.S. challenger has won 55, lost 10 drawn once and has one

Alabama Power Stops LSU

By Neil Amdur

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 12 (NYT).—As the hand-made sign said in Legion Field yesterday, it is the "Year of the Elephant" in Alabama.

Four days after a Republican herd rumbled through this Democratic stronghold in the presidential election, Alabama's unbeaten football team, whose symbol is a bright red elephant, crushed previously undefeated Louisiana State University, 35-21.

Bama's victory was its ninth of the season, assured the Crimson Tide of its eccond consecutive Southeastern Conference championship and set up a return to the Orange Bowl on New Year's night in Miami. More important, the decisiveness of the triumph, before a growd of 72,038 and a national television audience, unquestionably strengthened Ala-bama's position in the national

LSU scored first in the opening period on a 21-yard pass from Bert Jones to his 5-foot 7-inch split end, Jimmy Le Doux, But from the time that Bama's Terry Davis spotted Wayne Wheeler's white shoes etreaking past a pair of Tiger defenders, the Tide controlled the tempo despite a heroic passing performance by the 6-foot 3-inch, 205pound Jones that justified his bally hoo as an all-America quarterback and pro prospect.

Wheeler, the only member of the Alahama team who wears white shoes ("It makes me feel faster"), caught a 25-yard pass from Davis with 9 minutes 19 seconds left in the second quarter that tied the score. Then he outfaked Norm Hudgins, an LSU cornerback, for a 29-yard touchdown grab that put the Tide in front to etay 5 minutes into the Davis had the best passing effort of his career, 10 completions in 18 attempts for 157 yards, And he was just as effective on quarterback keepers off the wishbone offense. Interviewed at his headquarters as the last casualty figures were coming in the Kalser insisted that he would not lead Germany in the next campaign. At the loser's side, the Kaiser's wife, Mrs. Hohenzollern, wept sileotly into her bouquet of roses, reminding all present of the dreadful strains which modern warfare places upon the wives of our nation's standard-bearers.

It was generally assumed, of course, that the Kaiser was lying when he made his armisticenight declaration that he would not seek to lead his country in the next war. Certainly Lloyd George and Clemenceau expected that they would have to face the Kaiser the next time.

"The Kaiser," Lloyd George had said to Ciemenceau one day in the Hall of Mirrors at Ver-sailles, "is as inevitable as William Jennings Bryan." And Clemenceau had replied with the now famous mot, "II n'y a pas de quoi," which, freely translated, means, "William Jennings Brysn, Hubert Humphrey or Kaiser Bill-both Gallup and Harris show they cao oever win either the suburbs or upstate."

Shortly after this conversation Middle America turned against Wilson because he spent too much time at the summer White House in Sea Girt, N.J., a known spa for intellectuals and Establishment leaders.

Fortunately, however, Wilson bad created Armistice Day before Warren Harding's cabinet could sell it to a large corporation st giveaway prices.

Armistice Day was celebrated nonually during each year of World War II, and slthough many people were killed on each of those World War II Armistice Days, there was no personal malice involved and everyone understood that it was one of the things that happened to you in war, if you were oot lucky.

Laurence Parsons has been in search of the clusive ooh or ah since he became a professional magician in Phoenix, Aria in 1964. "A singer can sing a song with a rhythm that compels applause, but that ooh or ah," he says, "Is something only a magician can get."

With his assistant-wife Heidi, Mr. Parsons has played the New Letin Quarter in Tokyo and the Cafe de Paris in Bangkok. Talwan audiences are relaxed, Hong Kong audiences have to be approached coolly. The Germans want to know how a trick's done and tend to mutter loudly. "He pulled it from his sleeve." This time of year they do a lot of galas (Geneva this week), though they just finished up at s top Paris supper club, the Tête de l'Art, where they were introduced with pardonable hyperbole as fresh from Le Savoy de Londres though they haven't played there

Magicians are rarely beadliners: There are no Houdinis these days. Often Parsons and Heidi are given the thankless job of opening the show, especially in supper clubs. "A lot of people are still esting when the show starts. Our act is silent so the noise they make doesn't matter."

Appearances

Mr. Parsons and Heidi come out smiling and dressed to the nines-he in bespoke tails from London, she in pastels. "We try to look as good as we can for grooming, clothes and make-up," says Mr. Parsons who is tall and handsome with small, tidy hands and a slightly prim manner. One wonderful thing about magic, he says, is that is doesn't lend itself easily to smut.

His act is very good and bright and attractive and careful. His colored scarves, for example, are made and printed for him in Jspan, then processed by a com-pany in Ohio and carefully packed by Heidi so they emerge before hopefully stupefied audiences straight-seamed and wrinkle-free.

The worst thing is waiting to go on when your tricks are loaded and there is a long-winded MC. Mr. Parsons has a friend who does a cigarette act. Just before he goes oo he has to put the lighted cigarettes on his body so he can produce them lighted. One night he got ao MC who started off, "Ladies and gentlemen, a funny thing happened to me. . . ," Mr. Parsons's friend waited, smoldering. "By the time he went on he produced tiny create an illusion I would have to have a need for it." He is not being metaphysical here: Illusions are a specific branch of magic."

"An illusionist is a magician who does very big tricks like sawing a lady in half. Illusions are not very practical for traveling today. Acts that require more than two people aren't practical, an illusion would require a third person and maybe a ton of equipment."

Mr. Parsons and Heidi travel light with their bag of tricks and two doves, sometimes appearing in two different clubs each night. They have a specially printed brochure ("A superbly polished American magic act"—The Stage, London, "Parsons. travaille avec finesse et goût"-La Tribune de Geneve), gold-printed writing paper and glossy photographs especially posed to emphasize their youth and neatness. younger magicians is Channing Pollock, whose style, tricks, photographic poses and doves are widely copied. "There are fashions in magic," Mr. Parsons says: "There have been relatively few rabbits since the 1950s. The treod is to use doves. They're easier and generally speaking more beautiful, but the trouble is there's no longer any surprise in producing doves

"Before doves, cigarette acts were populer, before that ropes, before that billiard balls. A lot of magic acts today use poodles and candles."

Cards

Laurence Parsons is especially good with cards and is less interested in tricks, though he has his made to order in California. "American products are better made, European ones are too rickety," says Heidi, whose job as assistant is to look pretty and proud and also, more practically "to see that the act runs smoothly so my husband doesn't have to make extra

She also has to steer him clear of cables and other obstacles as he is dangerously myopic. "I like not being able to see the public," he says. "If they're scowling at my wife, I can't see, I can't be affected by sour faces. As far as I'm concerned, everybody likes me, everybody's having

He doesn't do patter or easily-copied mechanical tricks. "I hope audiences will see I'm a good manipulator, a studied, schooled magician rather than a man who went out and bought tricks."

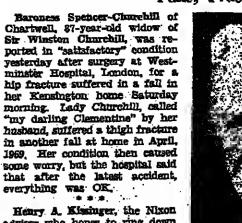

Laurence Parsons took up magic in Phoenix wheo he was 12, the age when most boys take up magic and then give it up. But he persisted, giving especially careful attention to Vol. II of "The Tarbell Course in Magic." He is now 30 and he and Heidi live near Munich, where she was a tour guide. He hasn't worked in the United States since 1965: apart from Las Vegas, the pinnacle, there simply isn't enough work for variety acts.

Mr. Parsons recalls once playing in a mental institution in the United States. "We worked to records and every time a record ended the audience would applaud. You see, they'd been taught at their social occasions to applaud when a record ends and then escort the ladies to their seats. So they'd applaud at the end of a record, but they wouldn't make a sound at the end of a trick.

"It was disconcerting the whole experience was," he says. "The whole point of magic is illogical. But it's hard to know how to do it with people who doo't know the difference between logic and illogic and the real and the unreal."

N. L. Williams, 47, a blind gospel singer on Tellahassee street cor-ners since 1963, said in a news-paper interview that all he wished for was a new guitar and a radio. A transistor radio came from a Wyoming druggist, and an Ohlo woman sent $100 for a new guitar. Other donations came in from Texas, and Williams commented in his guttural baritone: "Well, dreams come true. You know, all you've got to do is believe in God. I never worry about fine cars, clothes, land and things like that because after you go, you ain't going to carry it with you. All I want on this earth is a good living." He makes $5 or so daily from his sidewalk serenades, gets $91 a month in state

In St. Petersburg, John Webster Brown feared he might lose his business when his partner, a black widow spider named Mac, was gobbled up by a hungry cricket. Newspapers publicized the plight of Brown, 55, who is a stockbroker but has a part-time business using black widow spider webs to make cross-hair sights for surveying instruments. Well-wishers sent him 500 black widows by mailor somehow-safely.
